How is Case Management for DDD Services Changing? An Overview of the Support Coordination Model in the New Fee-for-Service System

Christine James
Director, Quality Improvement and System Reform

In the Medicaid-based, fee-for-service system, all individuals who receive Division-funded supports and services will utilize the Support Coordination model. This model is key to ensuring that individuals with intellectual and developmental disabilities are able to access needed supports in the community.

The Division is offering two seminars in January – one open only to providers and one open only to families – that will provide a basic understanding of the function of Support Coordination in the new system. These presentations are intended to walk stakeholders through the Support Coordination process, including differences between the Case Management model currently used and the new Support Coordination model.

There is limited seating for both of these seminars. Email registration is required, and all attendees will receive a confirmation email.

For the provider seminar, in order to accommodate as many agencies as possible, attendance is limited to no more than 2 (two) professionals per agency.
